Nearly 7,000 people journeyed to National Park yesterday to see the home team easily beaten by the Reds. Up to that time had managed to escape defeat but once since they faced the Eastern clubs upon their native heath.

This result was due to the splendid pitching of Frank Foreman, a castaway from the Senators. One of the early victories, with the able assistance of Mr. Long, who was snatched from a deserved obscurity to rattle about in the unpractical shoes of Lynch.

Foreman was hard enough for the local away, but at least four men were called out on strikes who should have gone down on balls, and two base decisions were very badly off.

ALL THE CREDIT.

Foreman deserves all the credit due to masterly pitching. He is now having his second time on earth as a League winner, and never before has he been so effective. He had excellent control, and to deceptive were his curves that the eight stalwart Senators made each three wild and ineffectual states at the elusive pig skin.

He had Joyce on his list three times, Crooks and Merced twice and Selbach once, beginning and ending the game with a strike out, and when men were on bases he was base-hit.

Merced, though not hit hard or often, was very easy for the Reds whenever they got a start with base occupied.

The wide difference between the batting of the two teams is shown in the statement that the home team made safe hits in every inning but one, and in that eight were thrown away, while the Porcupine put nine into three innings and only wasted one out of the whole lot.

The Reds did not waste their energies on prospective home runs, but dropped little fudge flies over the heads of the infielders, in marked contrast to the local attempts to kill the ball.

Abbey and Selbach alone made more than one hit, and each drove in a run.

WORTHY PRAISE.

When it comes to fielding there is nothing but praise to be said of the work of the Washington club. It was clean, sharp, and quick, and only one error affected the score, a juggler's throw in the first inning.

In spite of Merced's fine throwing, which killed three attempted larcenies, the base running of the home team was excellent, especially in the first, when four crimes were consummated by Selbach, Joyce, and Abbey.

Cartwright played a grand first, and Merced made much of it by knocking down two hard liners in the third inning and tossing the ball to first in time to catch Merritt and Hogreiver.

So far, so easily the winner of fielding honors on the visiting side, and McPhee showed himself the same invincible guardian of second as for many years past.

The Cincinnati team played a wide-awake, snappy game, made all the points possible, and it is hard to see how they could have lost so many games on the trip.

Their shortstop made two bad errors on muffed flies, but outside of this position the fielding was first-class.

ONLY ONE CHANCE.

Hoy, the favorite of the bleachers in former years, had only one chance and got in a nice single, and was given another by a sure out for Glasscock and blocked out of reach.

Merritt had a double and a single for his share of the batting, and Parrott and Smith each two singles.

After the home team saved two beautiful hits wasted by Joyce and Hammersart sent one down to Latham, who touched third and got the ball over to first in time to cut Jack off, and that was the last time that Joyce touched the ball for the day, while Hammersart could not get them safe.

MADE THREE BASES. After two were out in the fourth McPhee made three bases on a long drive to right center, but Cartwright, after a life given him by Smith, who dropped his foul fly, could only put up another for Jacky Tom Parrott to gobble.

In the last half with one out, Smith was sent to first and went to second on a grounder, which hit the umpire. Merritt, however, forced Smith on to a grounder well handled by Cartwright to Crooks, and Foreman's foul was pocketed by Cincinnati.

Cincinnati was more fortunate. Latham tied to Selbach, and Parrott pushed a grounder past short. McPhee forced Parrott by hitting to short, and Miller's hard grounder to left, fumbled by Abbey, put him on second and landed Parrott on the plate.

Smith's bouncer past Merced scored Miller. Cartwright walked to first, cleverly stole second, and centered home on Abbey's safe fly into center, Abbey being caught stealing.

Cincinnati went out in order for two innings. Merced making two brilliant scores in the second.

Joyce and Merced struck out in the third, and Abbey was caught at second, after a fine liner to left.

The Senators tied the score in the fifth. After Crooks had struck out, thanks to Mr. Long's poor eyesight, Abbey plunked a drive too hot for chirpy Arlie to handle, stole second and scored on Selbach's sprightly grounder over second after Merced had struck out.

Al, purchased second, and after Joyce had gone down on balls the pair made a snapping double steal, but both were left on Hammersart's fly to Miller.

The Reds answered the call with showing up a pair of runs. Hogreiver singled to left, Latham sacrificed, Parrott looped a ball over Crooks' head and Hogreiver scored. McPhee's loutery to Abbey sent Parrott home, but McPhee was caught by Abbey's return of the ball to second.

ANOTHER GREAT CHANCE. Washington had another great chance in the sixth. For the first time in the game the inning opened with a hit. Glasscock dropping a nice fudge fly to center, McPhee fumbled to Latham, Cartwright's safe hit to left, and Abbey's base on balls, after Crooks had been retired, filled the bases. Great hopes were kindled for a second and only batted a feeble grounder to McPhee.

The Senators made their last run on Smith's snuff of Glasscock's fly in short, on which Jack gained second. McPhee's out at first and Crooks' liner to left.

The visitors increased their lead in the eighth by Merced's lack of judgment. Hogreiver was given base, stole second and gained third on Latham's out from short to first.

Parrott hit Merced, and when the latter got the ball Hogreiver was half way between third and home, a sure victim, but Merced, after turning and looking at him, sent the ball to first and the runner scored.

Smith brought in the last run on a daisy-cutter to left, a duplicate by Hoy, Abbey's fumble, and Merritt's fly out to Selbach.

Chaps from the Diamond. In consideration of the rainy days that have interfered with the sport this week Mr. Wagner has decided to make the ladies' books good for today.

Mail and McGuire will be the home battery today, and Terry will probably be Chicago's pitcher.

Constant Reader—No, there are no grounds for the charge that Long is a home umpire.

For first year League players Miller and Hogreiver are about the freshest eggs that have been cracked.
